When traveling, it is a good idea to take out insurance. There are a couple of options: trip insurance and travel insurance. What is the difference? Trip insurance can help to reduce some financial losses incurred on a trip due to delays, cancellations or unforeseen circumstances. Travel insurance can cover a wider range of situations, including delays, interruptions, cancellations and other related problems. Additionally, it may also cover medical expenses or health emergencies that may arise during the trip.

Traveling can be expensive and delays and unforeseen circumstances may cause you additional financial loss. Moreover, there are many things that cannot be anticipated. While trip insurance can provide protection against such losses, travel insurance provides the extra assurance that expenses will be covered for medical care, hospital admissions, emergency dental care etc. Therefore, it is essential to have trip and travel insurance coverage.

There are three basic types of supplemental health insurance coverage. The first includes insurance for a single trip or a plan for all travel during the year, and is limited to medical expenses and medical evacuation coverage while travelling. The second type of plan is designed for customers of a tour company or cruise line and sold through the tour operator with whom you scheduled the trip. This type of plan would probably include trip cancellation benefits as well as medical coverage. The third type of over is a package that includes trip cancellation and related trip insurance coverage as well as medical coverage. There may be exclusions in the policy for dangerous sports and activities. If you want to be insured for this, you may have to opt for a more expensive policy.

The cost of travel insurance depends on the company you chose and the level of coverage. Typically, the cost of insurance will be 5% to 12% of the cost of the trip. It is important to buy coverage from a third party travel insurer that is financially sound. This is because, in the event that they go bankrupt, any travel protection offered by the tour operator themselves will be worthless, and only a portion, or none, of any outstanding claims might be paid. You could also buy travel insurance directly from the insurance companies.

For frequent travelers it is often more cost-effective to buy a yearly policy. Some travel insurance providers also offer plans specifically designed for student budgets on trips such as spring break travel, class trips, or study abroad. Typically, they provide coverage for trip cancellations or delays, medical emergencies, baggage problems and accidental death.

Some premium credit cards provide limited flight or travel insurance benefits such as emergency evacuation to an appropriate medical facility or baggage delay when the travel is charged on that credit card. You should check with your credit card company to find out what benefits are offered and if there are any restrictions.
